Axis Discusses Possible Entry of U. S. in War

Meanwhile, United States Seek Showdown With Russia

ROME — (AP)— The major three-power pact nations were understood Wednesday night to have conferred here within the past few days and some observers said the prospect of the United States becoming involved in the war through convoys probably was the major topic of discussion.

The subject of the talks among Italy, Germany and Japan could not be ascertained, but since Japan's only concern with the three-power pact is supposed to be her relations with the U. S. and Soviet Russia one or the other or both may have been discussed.

The Fascist press recalled Japan's pledge to fight the U. S. under the treaty in case the U. S. entered the war, and both Il Giornale d'Italia and Il Lavoro Fascista accused the U. S. of planning an attack on Japan.

U. S. Russian Showdown
WASHINGTON — (AP)— A showdown in the uncertain relations between the United States and Soviet Russia was believed imminent Wednesday as an afternoon conference was arranged for Secretary of State Hull and the Soviet Ambassador, Constantine Oumansky, the first in more than a year.

Both American and Russian diplomats were silent as to the purpose of Oumansky's call on Hull. That it was important for future relations between the two countries was taken for granted in informed quarters. The last interview the two had was in April, 1940.

Vichy Approves Darlan's Pact With Berlin

But Admiral's Disposition of French Fleet Remains Uncertain

VICHY — (AP)— The French government unanimously approved Wednesday terms negotiated between Hitler and French Vice Premier Jean Darlan presenting the United States with what diplomatic circles called the accomplished fact of European cooperation, designed to halt U. S. entry into the war.

There still was no official indication of what the terms involved, but a communiqué issued after the cabinet meeting said "the effect of these negotiations will be felt soon."

Admiral Darlan, who also is the Vichy regime's foreign minister, was disclosed this week to have met Hitler at an undisclosed time and place in the presence of German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop.

Diplomatic circles were agreed generally that the terms included not only economic but political collaboration as well between the French and their German conquerors.

In the exchange France was reported scheduled to receive varied advantages, as, for example, the return of a number of prisoners who are primarily farm workers; and a northward revision of the demarcation line, putting Paris in the zone not German-occupied, and leaving the Nazis in control of only one-fifth of France.

What France is giving, other than full economic and perhaps full political collaboration is not yet officially indicated here.

LONDON — (AP)— Foreign Secretary Eden bluntly warned Japan Wednesday that British economic restrictions against her would not be eased unless Japan recognized British rights in China.

He said instructions to this effect had been sent to the British ambassador at Tokyo.

Both the British ambassador and the U. S. envoy conferred separately Wednesday with Japanese Foreign Minister Matsuoaka.

Speaking in the House of Commons, Eden declared also that Britain had "great sympathy for Syrian aspirations for independence." (The British fear Syria may become a route for a German drive on Suez from Asia Minor.)

VICHY — (AP)— The Algerian postal administration is following the lead of the mother country and putting out one-franc stamps with the image of Marshal Petain.

A similar stamp of a different color will be issued later, selling for five francs but good for only one franc postage. The four francs difference will go for relief to demobilized soldiers and war prisoners.

Local Organizations to Aid in Better Homes Week Drive

The Chamber of Commerce is planning a Clean Up-Paint Up Program in connection with Better Homes Week which is being observed in Hempstead county.

At a meeting of the Ministerial Alliance Monday, all ministers present voiced approval of the campaign and agreed to give support by timely announcement or sermons from their pulpits next Sunday, emphasizing the spiritual values of such a campaign.

The five Garden Clubs in Hope have outlined a plan of city beautification which includes cutting grass on all vacant lots, planting small blooming plants around each electric light and telephone pole, beautification of highway No. 67 through the City of Hope, and the elimination of eyesores in the shape of billboards and dump heaps and junk piles within the city.

The City Schools will be a most important factor in the campaign. Children will be asked to contact every home in Hope and ask each one to agree to make one or more improvements in the home. A score card will be left at each home with suggested improvements. These cards will be checked for improvements planned and returned to the school. Later each home will be visited to see the improvements made.

Mayor Albert Graves has agreed to help out in the program by having the various departments of the City Government cooperate in cutting weeds, hauling away all rubbish, destroying mosquito breeding places and improving city buildings, streets and alleys.

Remmel Young has offered to donate the pictures for a "Tin-Can Matinee." Every boy or girl will be admitted for the price of ten tin cans. A truck will be stationed in front of the picture show and admission tickets will be given to each person who brings his or her ten tin cans.

Lyman Armstrong has donated the use of the show-windows in the Burr Building on Second Street and has agreed to decorate them with paint.

400 Soldiers Escort Negro

Ask Army to Guard Negro Charged With Rape

LITTLE ROCK (AP)— Approximately 400 soldiers from Camp Robinson, training center of the 35th division, provided a special escort Wednesday for John Henry Riney, 25-year-old negro, as he was removed from Pulaski county jail and taken into south-east Arkansas to face trial on a charge of raping a young white matron at McClellan in April.

Gov. Homer Adkins requested the troops in the absence of the Arkansas National Guard, now fully mustered into federal service, following conferences with southeast Arkansas peace officials and army officers.

The trial is set for Thursday in Desha circuit court in Arkansas City. Nearly a score of state police accompanied the soldiers, who appeared at the Pulaski jail shortly before noon in armored trucks on which machine guns were mounted to flank the auto in which the negro was placed for the 140-mile drive to Arkansas City. At the edge of the city a convoy of more than 50 auto and army trucks was formed for the journey.

Berlin Reports Documents Show Flight Purpose

Berlin Disavows Peace Plan; British Say Hess Giving Secrets

BULLETIN

LONDON — (AP)— The British press association said Wednesday that Rudolf Hess flew to Scotland in an attempt to meet the Duke of Hamilton and landed by parachute within a few miles of the Duke of Dugavil, his destination.

(This corresponds in part to Nazi accounts which said Hess sought to bring about peace.)

Diplomatic correspondents said it can now be disclosed that Hess made an attempt to communicate with the Duke by letter earlier. The Duke placed the letter in the hand of the authorities and no reply was made to Hess.

The Duke had met Hess on one or more occasions before the war in connections with sports, the report said.

BERLIN (AP)— Nazis declared Wednesday night that Rudolf Hess carried no documents to Britain likely to reveal German state and military secrets and that he flew to the Glasgow area to make contact with the Duke of Hamilton, described as "a member of a pacifist organization."

"They thought Hess was a politically incompetent and that his peace proposals might make in Britain would be disavowed by Berlin."

A German spokesman said Hess expected to fulfill his so-called peace mission in about two days, returning then to Germany with gasoline to be furnished by the British.

Earlier, one authorized source said Hess had expected to return to Germany in a few weeks.

Authorized quarters said the intentions of the former No. 3 Nazi were indicated in documents he left behind.

By the Associated Press
Rudolf Hess, the escaped Nazi deputy Fuehrer, was described by the British radio Wednesday as talking and writing "words which will make the German high command sweat."

The first semi-official intimation that he may already have divulged vital German military secrets.

British military intelligence officers were reported questioning the No. 3 Nazi closely.

Simultaneously the government controlled BBC began a barrage of 10 broadcasts a day to Germany on the Hess affair.

The London Daily Mail said that in preliminary conversations Hess "had indicated his personal disgust with the Nazi party" and told of the mounting tension among Adolf Hitler's party chieftains.

On Peace Mission?
Authorized quarters in Berlin said documents left behind by Hess indicated he planned to visit the Duke of Hamilton in Glasgow in an effort to bring about peace.

"Hess had the fixed idea that he was sort of a messiah, by whom a spectacular individual gesture could bring about a termination of hostilities," a Nazi spokesman said.

The spokesman declared Hess had no intention of approaching Prime Minister Churchill or other government leaders but that he had a "crazy notion" that a pacifist group could end the war.

"Hess did not flee as a traitor," the spokesman asserted.

Nazi officials had previously declared Germany would not accept any peace offer—except on German terms. In the Reich itself Germans received an oblique warning against listening to foreign broadcasts on the strange case.

DNE published a list of seven recent cases in which persons were sentenced from four to six years for tuning in their radios on foreign broadcasts.

Only two of five morning papers in Berlin mentioned Hess' flight to Britain.

Expect Churchill Interview
Churchill himself was expected to follow up the preliminary questioning of the prisoner with a personal interview. The British people eagerly clutching for facts through the fog of conjecture about Hess' flight from Nazidom hoped that out of that

Wars Are Won in Factories

Takes 18 Men to Maintain One
on Firing Line

By RAYMOND F. BLOSSER
AP Feature Service
CLEVELAND — Insisting that today's wars will be won in the factory, the National Machine Tool Builders Association calculates the present complex, mechanized warfare requires 18 men to maintain just one soldier on the firing line. In 1918 only five men backed up every man at the front.

The modern soldier fires a rifle three times as fast as in the first World War. He can travel, completely equipped, ten times as far in a day. The tank, introduced by the British in the first World War but a limited factor until the closing stages, now is vital. And the airplane's long-distance bomb-carrying capacity is 32 times that of the last great conflict. Therefore, the association calculates, "the real contest today is not on the firing line but on the factory production line where defense equipment is built."

The great army of men behind the army at the front today includes steel makers, shipbuilders, metal workers, farmers, parts assemblers, inspectors and a long list of others. But none is of greater importance than the country's operators of machine tools—an army of over a million men.

There are hundreds of types of machine tools, some of them small bench size units, others weighing 50 or more tons and standing as high as a three-story house. The industry says the demand is so tremendous that United States production this year will amount to $750,000,000—or $300,000,000 greater than last year, which was double booming 1933.

APL Project Is Recommended

3-Million-Dollar Plant Approved by Engineer

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Installation of a larger generator at the A. P. & L. Co.'s proposed 3-million-dollar steam power plant in the south Arkansas "sour gas" fields, and elimination of a proposed interconnection with lines of a Missouri power company, was recommended by J. E. Flanders, chief engineer of the department of Public Utilities, at a utilities commission hearing Wednesday.

Flanders testified that in his opinion it would be more feasible both from the standpoints of time and economics for the utility to install a second-hand 45,000-KWH generator which can be delivered immediately than to purchase a new 30,000-KWH generator for delivery in 19 months.

He said the difference in the power capacities of the two generators would be sufficient to justify elimination of a proposed interconnection with the Empire District Electric company system in southern Missouri.

SERIAL STORY

THREE TO MAKE READY

BY W. H. PEARS

YESTERDAY, Paula Jeffers, Chris Wentrich and Tony Beale have been pals through four years of college. Now, as commencement nears, Paula and Tony view the future seriously, but Chris refuses to mope over leaving Cardman. Paula begs him to be careful, not to get into any scrapes before graduation. Chris laughs at her fears, but does not promise.

CHAPTER II

THE memory of a kiss pulled Paula's mind away from Dr. Martin Lud's lecture. Usually his class was one of her favorites, but not today. She caught fragments of the talk, but her mind seemed only large enough to hold Chris.

"Suppose we ask ourselves a question," Lud suggested. "What is the eventual aim of these..."

Again Paula's mind drifted. What was the eventual aim of Chris? He had kissed her. That in itself was pretty startling. Long ago Chris had decided that love was too tame. The only effect a moonlight night had on him was to make him want to chase the moon. He asked of life only that it give him plenty of thrills and excitement.

Then why had he kissed her this morning? Was it simply to avoid making a promise? Or had she really sensed a tenderness in the touch of his lips? Paula tried to ignore the sudden jump of her heart at the thought. Why, the whole idea was silly! Chris was completely self-sufficient, yet...

Paula shook her head impatiently. What was wrong with her? Moping like a high school girl over her first love!

For several moments she gave her undivided attention to Dr. Lud. But before she knew it her thoughts were flitting mothlike back to the flame that was Chris.

Paula Jeffers decided to face the issue squarely. She was in love with Chris. Before long, if she did nothing about it, Chris would walk under Cardman's Arch and she might never see him again. Her only hope was to crack his brittle crust and find out what lay beneath. She must be alone with Chris often, without Tony...

Paula's eyes followed the diagonal slant of a sunbeam across the classroom. It stretched downward, bursting into white flame as it touched Kilo Sherwood's hair. Involuntarily Paula thought, "What a stunning creature!"

A NIMBUS of mystery hung about Kilo's slim shoulders. Little was known of her except that she headed the Anti-Fraternal League, a group of students whose goal was the elimination of fraternities and sororities from Cardman. They denounced "campus cafe-society" and harried their Greek-letter opponents at every opportunity.

Until recently no one had taken the League's activities seriously. Then it had made the mistake of kidnapping one by one the musicians playing for a Pan-Hellenic dance at which President Van Horn was guest of honor.

The following morning Van Horn issued an ultimatum. The faculty was tolerant. It held the principles of free speech and personal liberty sacred. But the League had gone too far. Either it would disband, or it would be disbanded.

This statement had served merely to drive the League to cover. They now held their meetings in secret, their zeal unabated. Everyone on the campus knew it. Perhaps the faculty also knew it. If so, it let the matter rest, hoping possibly to avoid open dissension in Cardman.

Dr. Lud was saying, "I believe it is our duty to resist these changes..."

Illustrated by Carol Johnson

Paula had heard that this Kilo Sherwood was making a "big play" for Chris. Now Kilo was smiling, as Chris argued.

Paula saw Kilo Sherwood lean toward Chris, seated next to her, and whisper. Chris stopped nibbling an eraser, grinned. Kilo locked slim hands together, gave them a little shake of encouragement.

Suddenly Paula's body went cold. For weeks she had ignored rumors floating about the Gamma Tau house that Kilo was making a "big play" for Chris. Paula thought it impossible: she and Chris alone tonight and pound some sense into his head. If that'd been anyone but Dr. Lud, Chris'd be cooling his head in the Dean's office by now.

"I'm scared, Tony," Paula admitted. "Chris has got that look in his eye. I've seen it before. It means trouble. Remember when he let all the air out of Dean Larson's tires, and..."

"Paulie, those were kid jokes. But getting mixed up with this League outfit might be more serious. Oh, sure, I know they're just a bunch of brainless nuts, but Van Horn hates that sort of thing on the campus. He'll let them alone so long as they keep quiet. But if Chris starts running with them, he won't let them keep quiet. Just before Commencement is no time to stir up trouble..."

Paula's lips trembled angrily. "Oh, Tony, Chris wouldn't have blown off if she hadn't..."

Tony nodded. "I saw it, too, Paulie. But we mustn't get sore at Chris. We've got to keep him from doing something crazy."

"You're taking this thing pretty seriously, Tony," Paula's hazel eyes were shrewd. "Do you know something I don't?"

Tony met her gaze. "Bill Jenks has come over from the city. I saw him hanging around the Sweetland. That scandal sheet he works for doesn't waste time nor money on anything that isn't pretty sensational."

"But what could it be?" Paula asked.

"I don't know," Tony admitted. "But my hunch is that something's in the wind, and that it concerns the League. That's why I want to talk to Chris tonight. ... Here he comes now. I'll beat it before he sees us with our heads together."

CHRIS looked a bit sheepish. "I gave the old boy a prod, didn't I, Paulie?"

"You certainly did!" Paula retorted. "Chris, why did you do it?"

"Because that 'no change' stuff burns me up!"

"Look, Chris," Paula said. "I'm in a rush now to catch another class. How about you and Tony and me doing something tonight?"

"Tonight?" Chris shuffled his feet. "Well..."

Paula saw a silver-blond head approaching. It bent close to Chris's ear for an instant as Kilo said softly, "You won't forget to pick me up at 7:30, Chris?" Then she was gone.

Chris said weakly, "I—I'm sorry, Paulie, but I'm all tied up..."

Business-as-Usual Will Be Mighty Unusual After Nation Feels Big New Defense Push

WASHINGTON — The story is told around OPM of two business men from the southwest who came to Washington, looked over the defense headquarters, made a careful study of the things they might manufacture in their plants to help out the defense production, and then decided they wouldn't try to get any war orders because the war work would interfere with their usual business.

That's the exception and not the rule, but the incident is mentioned here as a wistful gossamer wave at happy, carefree days fast going glimmering. The incentives you have heard against business men trying to carry on their business-as-usual are mild to what will soon be heard abroad in the land. So far, there have been only gentle admonitions from the chiefs of defense. Now they're ready to tell you how business is not going to be as usual.

Douglas C. MacKenzie, dollar-a-year deputy director of the Division of Purchases in the Office of Production Management, recently outlined for the business advisory conference of the Department of Commerce some of the specific ways in which business is not going to be as usual. It was a broad, undetailed treatment, but in general MacKenzie brought out the idea that the days of business based on economic surpluses were over, and the days of economic scarcity were ahead.

Comes the Dawn
If all this sounds scary, the plan will have to be "Gaily" for the purpose is simply to help the hometown people, not in touch with the Washington rattle-dazzle, realize how this defense effort is going to move into every mill, store and household in the land and settle down as a non-paying star boarder for the emergency. The parade of witnesses before the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee protesting against the proposed taxes on musical instruments, sporting goods, chewing gum, candy, cigars and cigarettes, moving pictures, booze and cabarets is perhaps the last gasp of the business-as-usual advocates. All these gentlemen are estimable citizens, presidents of companies and trade associations. But their pleas for low taxes on luxuries seem futile.

This, however, is only a minor part of the program. When Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones blandly stated that the national debt might have to go to $90 billion, from the present $65 billion statutory limit, he wasn't kidding.

Full realization of what this thing is going to cost is just beginning to dawn in Washington, and as sure as the east, it's still midnight in the rest of the country, if it isn't still yesterday or the day before. The concept you are asked to believe in all this darkness is that Germany is winning the war because she has spent and is spending more on war than anyone else on earth. And if you believe that money is everything, the only answer is that the United States must spend more than Germany if it is to defeat Hitler, or even just help Britain defeat Hitler.

That Big 30 Per Cent
To accomplish this will mean even more than sacrifices through the payment of extra heavy taxes or the priority of defense needs over civilian needs. It can mean a complete change in the economic life of the country, a sacrifice of things that, once gone, might never be regained.

Now resting on the President's desk are supposed to be, among other things, proposals for organizations of economic warfare, civilian defense and control over production and distribution of civilian consumers' goods. This last is the one that will hit business-as-usual the hardest. It is based on the theory that 80 per cent of the sales of any merchant come from 20 per cent of the merchandise. In other words, staples sell best, and the 80 per cent of the goods that sell least are the fancy groceries, the ultra-styles, the de luxe models that are window dressing. If production of window dressing can be eliminated and effort concentrated on the standardized lines, the country's productive establishment can, it is estimated, be raised 30 per cent. Thirty per cent more guns—planes—tanks—ammunition may be just what it takes to get this thing over with.

A straw vote shows a majority will have new hats before long. Some June grads will have two degrees—and the world will give them the third.

A cynic is all right in his place, but he never goes there till he dies. Secretary Stimson asked every man in the army to write home on Mother's Day. And we suggest every week thereafter.

Hills No Object to Oldsmobile

Sensational performance on the steepest grade in the nation was demonstrated at the General Motors Proving Grounds last week by this 1941 Oldsmobile six-cylinder club sedan. The new hill, a 60 per cent grade constructed by General Motors to test army equipment, provided an excellent opportunity to demonstrate the flexibility and exclusive safety advantages of Oldsmobile's Hydra-Matic Drive, according to H. T. Youngren, Oldsmobile's chief engineer. Because clutch pushing, gear shifting and car stalling are all eliminated with Hydra-Matic Drive, it is possible to climb even the steepest hills with ease and safety, he added.

Explains Work of CCC Camp

Alton Celebrated 8th Anniversary in April

Although the Civilian Conservation Corps or the CCC, as it is known to a large per cent of the people, celebrated its eighth anniversary in April, having been created or established in April, 1933, a large per cent of the public has only a vague idea as to how this organization operates, its duties and functions and what it means to the United States.

In spite of the many programs which have been held during the last eight years in which camp officials have participated in an effort to educate the public as to the benefits derived from the existence of this government operated organization, it has been noted that many people to this date have never been informed properly as to how the CCC or Uncle Sam's Conservation Army operates.

Since this is an organization controlled and operated by the taxpayer's money, it is felt that the public in general should have a clear conception as to the work done by the enrollees in the CCC, the many benefits derived by the youth of this country from having served periods of enrollment in camps throughout the country, the routine followed in these camps and many more important details concerning the Civilian Conservation Corps. In order to bring this about, camp officials and enrollees of Company 4754 located at Camp Alton, six miles south of Hope on Highway 29, will carry on a continuous publicity program in order to enlighten the public in the local and surrounding counties in regard to the CCC.

Various methods will be used by the camp personnel in carrying on this "Know Your CCC" program. From time to time certain days will be designated by the Commanding Officer as Visiting Day, at which time all persons are invited to visit the camp to see and hear explained how the CCC operates. Friday, May 16 has been set as the first official visiting day under this new program.

To Hold Camp Programs
From time to time various selected groups will be invited to visit the camp in a body, to hear and participate in programs, which will give them a clear picture of the workings of the organization. Invitations have been extended to all Selecting Agency officials to visit camp, Friday May 16 to participate in a program. A tentative list of other groups which will be invited at later dates are schools of officials, civic club officials, county and city officials, newspaper men, and representative of the American Legion.

Newspaper Articles
On an average of about once weekly, articles will appear in local papers, illustrated with pictures made at Camp Alton, to explain many phases of the CCC program in the camp and on the job. Articles which will appear at later dates will explain the CCC enrollee doing conservation work and the value of the conservation work to the country, job training in the CCC, the part being played by the CCC in National Defense, vocational and academic training in the camps, high school and college training centers in the Arkansas District, District schools conducted for enrollees, employment of ex-enrollees, and many other interesting features. Considerable time and effort will be expended in the near future to acquaint the public with the CCC program. The co-operation of the public is requested in making this publicity scheme a success.

Harrison in Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

Cotton Goes Up as South Cheers Matinee Marvel

Lucie Neville is pinch-hitting for Paul Harrison, now touring army camps and defense industries.

By LUCIE NEVILLE

NEA Service Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD — When Joe Cotton first came to town, he was introduced as "Katharine Hepburn's leading man in 'Philadelphia Story.'" It is significant that now they say, "Joe Cotton—you know—in 'Citizen Kane.'"

At the grimly hostile press preview, he got the first applause and it was spontaneous clapping that surprised even the critics themselves. Cotton says that was mighty nice of Hollywood, and he hopes they keep on thinking the same way about him.

Like many movie newcomers, he is well known to most of the country outside Hollywood. New York theatergoers saw him not only in "Philadelphia Story," but in most of Orson Welles' Mercury Productions. Cotton says he usually played low comedy parts but occasionally was given a minor dramatic role to keep him pacified.

Teamed on the radio with Martha Scott in a program of domestic difficulties and with a major tragedy in every week's script, he sold his sponsors' insecticide and cold cream by the gallon. The southern and mid-western tour of "Philadelphia Story" added more fans. He was, of course, the logical person for the film version of the play, but M-G-M wouldn't consider anybody except screen stars to support Miss Hepburn.

Drops Cheshire
Around Richmond, Va., he's "Joe Junior" or "Joe Cheshire" to practically everybody. Petersburg, his home town, is only 20 miles from there. When the tour played there, Cotton's entrances were greeted with friendly hails from the audience and audible comments such as, "Hasn't changed much, has he? ... lost some weight, though."

Friends were right put out with him, though, because he wouldn't use his full name of Joseph Cheshire Cotton on the program. Perfectly good name, wasn't it? Got it from Bishop Cheshire.

Matinee crowds used to rush back to the stage door to see Miss Hepburn and the others come out, and Cotton—who was getting his first taste of real popularity—look it big. He signed autographs with a flourish, beamed, and never cheated the fans by ducking out a side door.

He can turn his own southern accent on and off but used it pretty heavily in the "Kane" character, though he hadn't planned to. It just happened that after Welles broke his ankle, the only scenes that conveniently could be shot in a hurry were the ones in which Cotton was the garrulous old sanitarium patient.

Ordinarily, these would have been filmed last, so the actor hadn't studied the mat all, nor had he ever played a doddering ancient. So Welles suggested that to make it easier and more natural Cotton play it southern.

Former Reporter
The tall, curly-haired blond Virginian has worked hard at his profession for 14 years, starting with a little theater in Miami when he was 17. Winters, he was a reporter for a Florida newspaper but every summer tried to crash Broadway.

Finally, David Belasco gave him a job as understudy to Lynn Overman, later to Melvyn Douglas, and made him an assistant stage manager. There were 58 straight weeks of Boston stock company, then Cotton met Welles and later joined his stage and radio companies.

He probably won't be in the next Welles film because RKO, which signed him for two pictures, is planning scripts now.

Winant Speaks to British

Says War Is Not Britain's Fight Alone

LONDON—(P)—U. S. Ambassador John Winant told the English-Speaking Union Wednesday that the "freedom-loving and peace-loving people on this earth are coming to realize that this is not Britain's fight alone and that their destinies may depend on the use they make of their navies."

He expressed hope that in debate over losses at sea of goods manufactured in the U. S. both Britons and Americans "realize that the mere statement of sinking of ships from America does not tell the whole story."

"It only proves, as does the successful transport of troops to the Middle East, the protective power of adequate convoys," he said.

Stroking the Dragon

Now in these days, when each new dawn brings a new sensation and no man knows what new situation he may face when he wakes in the morning, comes the possibility that Japan may back off and take stock of its China war.

Bear in mind that this adventure began 10 years ago. Since that time Japan has been, if not always at war, always living under war conditions. Since July 7, 1937, the war has been continual; four years of an expensive foreign war, costly in manpower, in money, in morale.

The Chinese have been beaten, steadily and repeatedly, yet they have not been conquered. In one of the most heroic migrations of all history, they simply withdrew westward, to lay the foundations of a new China. Building from the bottom, a new nation has been created almost literally, which has fought on for nearly four years, unconquered.

Comes now the Japan Advertiser, an influential newspaper which would scarcely dare to speak so without official sanction, suggesting that Japan give up some of the territory its military have gained in China, consolidate the rest, and seek peace. The task this paper proposes is no less than that "the Japanese army should prove that its presence in China means no encroachment on China's political and territorial integrity but instead means peaceful, friendly intentions."

One hears a great deal about the "Oriental mind" and its subtleties. Perhaps it will be possible for the Japanese to prove to the Chinese their essentially peaceful intentions, though there are a million and a half Chinese, dead, thirty million homeless, and fifty million who have had to make new homes in the interior. Their testimony may influence China's feeling about Japanese friendship.

Probably the Japanese newspaper's proposal is a trial balloon. But suppose the Japanese peace plan is a success. Suppose China agrees to stop fighting, yielding vast territories and concessions.

What, even then, would Japan have gained by 10 years of war on China? Simply the creation of a new, progressive, militarized, and westernized China as a neighbor, instead of the old sleepy, disorganized, hand-and-tradition-riding push-over which was her neighbor in the past. Time and China can both wait to see just how great a gain this will have been for Japan in the long run.

Japan has awakened the sleeping

MIND YOUR MANNERS

T. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. If you do not smoke yourself, should you have ash trays in your living room?
2. Is it correct to serve bottled soft drinks to guests who stop by on a warm afternoon or evening?
3. Is it gracious to say when discussing a person, "She comes from a good family" or "Her family amounts to something in the town"?
4. Is it good manners for a woman, caught by guests in a house dress, to keep talking about how awful she looks?
5. Is it good manners to say, "Haven't you gained weight?" to a woman?
6. What would you do if—
You are a house guest in a friend's home and you need to have some laundry done—
(a) Ask your hostess' maid to do the laundry for you?
(b) Ask your hostess if you can wash out a few things?
(c) Send your clothes to a commercial laundry?
- Answers
1. Yes, for the convenience of guests who might like to smoke.
2. Yes.
3. No. It sounds snobbish. It is all right to say "She has an interesting family."
4. No. It will only embarrass the guests and make them feel that they are not welcome.
5. No. Not unless you know that she has been trying to gain weight.
Best "What Would You Do" solution—(b) or (c). A house guest should try to take enough clothes so that having to have laundry done won't be a problem.

Chief of Staff Toils All Waking Hours

By GERRY DICK
REAL Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—A brigadier general, newly assigned to the office of Chief of Staff, recently received for duty to General George C. Marshall, Gen. Marshall greeted him by handing him a sheaf of papers tagged with the red "urgent" sticker.
"You'd better go to work right now," he said.
This is the man who commands all of America's land forces—answerable only to the President and the Secretary of War—summed up by his own words: "A few years ago we had lots of time and money. Now we have lots of money and no time."
When Gen. Marshall took office in September 1939, the U. S. Army consisted of 250,000 officers and men. Today, a year and a half later, that army has grown to 1,250,000—the number which the Chief of Staff had told Congress was "the very minimum necessary for the immediate protection of the continental United States."
His Own Work Sets Example
The job, accomplished through the unrelenting self-discipline he developed during his student days (when he spent holidays taking 30-mile hikes in the parade ground pace), has shaded the General's hair from sandy blond to gray.
To get his job done, he arrives at his office in the huge, cream-white Munitions Building at 7 a. m.—nearly two hours before his subordinates. He seldom leaves, even for lunch, until 1 p. m.—and then he usually is carrying a brief case full of "home work."
His air-conditioned office has the atmosphere of a man who gets things done. It is simply equipped with brown leather furniture. A bronze equestrian statue of Simon Bolivar stands on a corner table. The polished brass name-plate, which proclaims his Chief of Staffship is seldom on his huge, ornate desk, which first belonged to Gen. Phil Sheridan. The desk is bare save for the papers he is working on at the moment. "To cut red tape, you've got to be deadly accurate," he says.
Retains Poise, Despite Strain
Despite the pressure of his work, Gen. Marshall is unhurried, composed, soft spoken. On these sultry spring days when the trees outside his window are a distracting reminder that war plans do not keep pace with the season's advance, he greets a caller with steady courtesy, is as attentive as if he did not have another thing on his mind.
He may be wearing a gray, pin stripe, flannel suit, blue shirt, darker blue tie. He takes off his steel-rimmed spectacles, sits down and asks you to find a comfortable chair. Tall, angular, he has the healthy look of a man who takes good care of himself. He keeps in condition by riding every day, sometimes after work as well as before breakfast. At 60, he can wear out many younger officers on his staff.

A very moderate smoker and drinker, he enjoys having a few friends to dine at his No. 1 Fort Myer house, but dislikes big parties. An excellent raconteur, he had to learn some new stories since he recently decided to give up swearing. "It has just occurred to me," he told a junior officer, "that a man swears because he hasn't an adequate vocabulary to express himself." And he added as an afterthought: "Any way, it's a - low habit."
His first wife, who was his VMI "drag" (military for best girl) died in 1927. His second wife was a Shakespearean actress before her first marriage. Marshall's step-daughter, Molly, to whom he is devoted,

The General recently bought a house in Leesburg, Va., and when he retires in 1944, he will divide his time between the fox hunting country and his rapid-fire routine in Washington. He likes nothing better than to pack a lunch, hire a rowboat and spend a Sunday pulling up and drifting down the Potomac River.
He hasn't had a real holiday since he took his job. When he can get a lay away from his Washington desk, he gets into a Beechcraft plane and makes a flying inspection trip to watch maneuvers in the field or the testing of new planes and guns.
He is popular with his men, although his dignity never allows him to be matey with them. He is almost invariably patient with the less understanding of his subordinates, but it irks him to have an officer repeat a point he has made.
He has a phenomenal memory and an ability to concentrate that makes it unnecessary to tell him anything twice. General Pershing, to whom he was senior aide for five years, called him the best organizer he ever had and summed up his unique genius with the tribute: "George Marshall understands military."
Except for Gen. Leonard Wood, "the doctor from Harvard," George Marshall is the only non-West Pointer to become U. S. Chief of Staff. He says he doesn't remember when he didn't want to be a soldier. The Republican congressman from Uniontown, Ky., refused young Marshall an appointment to West Point because his father had voted the Democratic ticket. So George enrolled at V. M. I.
He was only a fair student, graduating 15th in his class, but his soldierly qualities won him the Senior First Captaincy, V. M. I.'s top undergraduate honor. After graduation Marshall got a commission as a Second Lieutenant of Infantry, assigned to the Philippines. Here he had his first opportunity to distinguish himself.

The officer in command of large scale maneuvers was suddenly taken ill. Young Marshall was suggested as the man who might understand the problem involved. The commandant asked him: "Do you know how to draw up a field order?" "Yes, sir, I think I do." "Well, then, draw one."
Marshall's plan for the islands' defense was so successful that one of his superiors remarked: "It's too bad that that youngster can't be made a brigadier general."
His next big chance came in France, when he was made responsible for the secret movement of 820,000 men and equipment for a surprise attack in the Meuse-Argonne sector. He completed the maneuver in 14 days, and it proved one of the cleverest operations of the war.
About this time Marshall's superiors began to watch his career, and when the war was over, he returned home as Gen. Pershing's senior aide.
Made Chief of Staff in 1939, he inherited an army led by officers who clung to tradition like moss to a tree. To wrench them from textbook tactics, he put 70,000 men in the field near New Orleans for maneuvers. Things went badly and every one expected the Chief to take it hard. Instead, he was pleased. "It showed us our shortcomings," he said, and by "us" he meant the opposition to his streamlined methods.
When he took office as Chief of Staff, Gen. Marshall told Congress: "The Army machine is probably less than 25 per cent ready for immediate action." Just a month ago he gave another report. He said that the Army is "now over the hump," with 1,250,000 "properly organized recruits" receiving training and "exhibiting the highest morale I've ever seen."
More than any one man, George Marshall is responsible for putting the Army "over the hump."

conference, through an expanded report Churchill promised to the House of Commons, they would get at least an inkling of Hess' story and what it might mean to Britain.
Informed sources in London did not encourage that hope. However, they declared that whatever information about Hitler's military plans might be gleaned from the Fuehrer's erstwhile confidant obviously will be kept a secret.

TOKIO—The flight of Rudolf Hess from Germany to Great Britain was prominently displayed Wednesday in Japanese newspapers. The Times Advertiser said "News of the flight of Hess caused great consternation in Japanese diplomatic circles."
Kokumin, linking the flight with German moves in Iraq, said: "In the face of the present situation it has come to be even suspected Germany has gone too far into the issue of Arabia and that with Iran brought into the whirlwind a new critical state will be created between Germany, Britain and the Soviet Union."

Nazis Say Red Sea War Zone Say Vessels in That Area Risk Being Sunk

BERLIN—(AP)—In the face of President Roosevelt's opening of the Red Sea to American shipping the German government announced Wednesday the northern part of the sea is an operations zone and all vessels traveling there risked destruction.
Whether any American ships are in the area or not there was not known here. No specific mention was made of the United States, but the warning to that country was plain.
Presumably mine-laying German planes and bombers will be sent into the Red sea zone in view of developments in the eastern Mediterranean. German planes already have been active in the Suez canal zone to the north, and at least one German surface raider has been operating in the Indian ocean far to the south.
(The British recently announced destruction of one German surface raider by the British cruiser Cornwall in an Indian ocean battle. The sunken Nazi ship was believed to be the former trans-atlantic liner Hansa.)

formation as to the progress that has been made in this work.
Since Hope was the site for the first demonstration project in Southwest Arkansas, it can truly be said that the people of this immediate territory can be considered as pioneers in the soil conservation movement.
This work started with the establishment of the CCC Camp in July 1935, followed by the demonstration project in the fall of the same year, and then finally the organization of the Soil Conservation District in which operations started approximately two years ago this month.
In addition to the Terre Rouge-Bodeau District which was organized in Hempstead, Nevada and Lafayette Counties, there is the Mine Creek District in Howard county, the Cossatot District in Sevier county, the Ouchita District in Ouachita county, the Little River District in Little River county, and the Arkansas River District in Arkansas county. There have recently been submitted petitions for districts in Clark, Pike and Miller counties. You can readily see the influence that the people of Hope have had in soil conservation in Southwest Arkansas.
The last monthly progress report on the Terre Rouge-Bodeau District shows that there has already been planned 1228 farms comprising 164,270 acres. The latest district supervisors' report shows that the combined treatment in this district is greater than in any district in the State of Arkansas, regardless of the fact that some of the districts are more than a year older than this one. The following are a few of the figures on practices that have already been established:
Contour Cultivation—16,938 acres.
Cover Crops—8,000 acres.
Diversion Terraces—9,343 rods.
Approved Rotations—15,766 acres.
Terracing—875 miles.
Woodland Management—22,000 acres.
Sodding Pastures—3,491 acres.
Terrace Outlet Channels—6,250 rods.
This is only a few of the practices which have been established on the farms. They will serve to indicate, however, that there has been more than mere planning.
The office at Hope still serves that part of the district lying within Lafayette County and most of the area of Hempstead county. In addition to that this office provides supervision for the districts in the other counties named above. Because of the large number of agreements and the demand for farm plans, it was necessary last July to establish a sub-office at Prescott. It may be necessary at some time in the future to establish another work unit in Lafayette county.
You will be interested to know that the work as a whole has met with such widespread approval that Congress saw fit to appropriate a substantial additional sum for operations beginning July 1.
The personnel of the Soil Conservation Service deeply appreciates the co-operation that has been given by the business men of Hope, and I am quite sure that the supervisors of the Terre Rouge-Bodeau District would like for me to express their appreciation at the same time.
Very truly yours
Elston S. Leonard
District Conservationist

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A secret flight of 21 long range army bombers from the mainland to Hawaii was disclosed Wednesday by the war department. The planes departed Tuesday night from San Francisco and reached Hickam field on the island of Oahu.
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Consumption of cotton set a new monthly record of 920,142 bales in April, the census bureau announced Wednesday.
The previous record for a single month was in March of this year with 854,178. Officials said the high rate of consumption reflected the manufacture of cotton goods for military and domestic use.
Consumption totaled 6,995,238 bales for the 9 months ending April 30.
Officials predicted that consumption for the season, ending July 31, will be largest on record.

Improved buying power of the public has encouraged manufacturers to produce better quality cotton goods. Among such materials are chambray, fine gingham, seersucker, gabardine, and novelty weaves, Miss Marshall says.
